Interview with Luís Laginha, Chairman and CEO of Euronext Lisbon, in Diário de Notícias (January 23, 2012):

NYSE Euronext and Deutsche Börse are finalising the merger process between the two exchanges' groups but are still waiting for the green light from the European authorities. In an interview to DN/Dinheiro Vivo, Euronext Lisbon's CEO talked about the importance of this operation.

1. How important is the merger of NYSE Euronext with Deutsche Börse?

By merging the two groups NYSE Euronext and Deutsche Börse, we will be creating the world's largest stock exchange that is overwhelmingly European in nature, with 80% of board seats, over 70% of revenues in the European Union and employees from all 27 Member States. The merged company will be domiciled in the Netherlands and supervised by regulators. It is extremely important for us because the transaction has a compelling industrial rationale and is good for the EU. Furthermore, there is no other 'EU alternative' in exchange consolidation.

The merger will improve the EU's financial integration, and strengthen Europe's position as a leading global financial center. It will improve the financing of the EU's real economy, particularly SME and it will improve the transparency and stability of the financial system.

2. What advantages will bring to companies, investors and markets the creation of the largest exchange in the world?

The merger will assist in financing the real economy (in particular SMEs) in Europe and stimulating job creation, thereby promoting economic growth and welfare; European companies will benefit from access to a wider investor base, thereby deepening financial integration in Europe, and reducing the cost of both trading and raising capital. Finally, the merger will free up more than €3 billion in capital due to cross-margining efficiencies and generate €2billion a year in cost-savings for users.

3. What are the main barriers to the operation and remedies proposed by the group ?

The main barrier to our operation is the market definition as understood by DG Competition. Their view of the market is deeply misguided. Our market for derivatives is global and not regional, and becoming even more so. Our largest competitor is the CME, based in the US. Furthermore, we face significant competition from the other-the-counter (OTC) derivatives market which makes up over 80% of all trading.

The remedies that we have proposed address all concerns raised by the Commission while preserving the industrial and economic logic of the merger.

They include selling our overlapping business in individual equity derivatives and off-book services, establishing an innovative and unique clearing access service to enable third parties to launch new derivatives products, and maintaining our fees for a period of three years.

4. Despite the letter to the president of the European Commission and the appeal made by several personalities, what the group expect will be the final answer of Brussels?

We are working hard to convince the European Commission that they should base their answer on a true definition of the global derivatives market and we will continue to persuade them of our arguments until a decision is taken.
