Komatsu to Establish Sales and Service Subsidiary in Australia

Komatsu Ltd. (hereinafter "Komatsu") (President and CEO: Kunio Noji) has decided to clearly separate the operations of Komatsu Australia Pty. Ltd. (hereinafter "Komatsu Australia") (Equity holding ratios: 60% by the Komatsu Group and 40% by Mitsui & Co., Ltd.). A distribution subsidiary engaging in sales and service of construction and mining equipment in Australia and neighboring countries (hereinafter "Oceania"), Komatsu Australia will be divided into two functions of production and sales/service. While continuing to be involved in the production-related operations, such as inventory management of new equipment and parts, local assembly of new equipment and installation (refabrication of equipment) and remanufacturing (sales of remanufactured components), Komatsu Australia is going to establish a new subsidiary which will be exclusively responsible for the customer-oriented operations (sales and service of equipment).

1. Reasons for the Establishment of New Subsidiary

Komatsu Australia has operated as a sales and service distributor of Komatsu construction and mining equipment over the years in Oceania which has rich natural resources. Market demand has been steadily growing, centering on mining equipment, and Komatsu believes that similar market conditions will continue into the future. Against this backdrop, Komatsu has determined that it is appropriate to separate Komatsu Australia's functions and clearly define the respective responsibilities by establishing the new company which will exclusively engage in sales and service operations in order to enhance its customer support capability. As a result, Komatsu Australia will be better positioned to further improve the efficiency of its production-related operations, such as inventory management of new equipment and parts, local assembly of new equipment and installation and remanufacturing. Komatsu Australia will also reinforce its collaboration with other Komatsu manufacturing subsidiaries to improve its QC&D (quality, cost and delivery) capabilities, while offering support to the new sales and service subsidiary.

2. Method of Establishment

Komatsu Australia is going to establish its wholly owned subsidiary which will be responsible for sales and service of Komatsu construction and mining equipment in Oceania. Komatsu Australia will remain responsible for its production-related operations, such as inventory management of new equipment and parts, local installation and remanufacturing.
