Boeing Contract

On November 12, 2007, RTI International Metals, Inc. (RTI or the Company) entered into a ten-year agreement with The Boeing Company to supply extruded, welded and fully machined value-added structural titanium components for the Boeing 787 Dreamliner. While the contract is a requirements type contract and the total volume is subject to the continuation of the Boeing 787 project and the number of airplanes constructed under the project as well as other factors, RTI currently estimates that the contract will generate in excess of $900 million in revenue over its term which commences in 2008 and runs through 2017.

The Company's press release announcing the Boeing contract is attached as Exhibit 99.1.
