NTT DoCoMo to Form Comprehensive Business Tie-up with

Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company

TOKYO, JAPAN, January 31, 2006 NTT DoCoMo, Inc., announced today that it has agreed with NTT Communications Corporation (NTT Com), Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company (PLDT), and PLDT's largest shareholder First Pacific Company Limited that DoCoMo will acquire 12,633,486 PLDT shares (approximately 7% of PLDT's issued shares) owned by NTT Com for approximately 52.1 billion yen. In addition, DoCoMo and PLDT will form a comprehensive business tie-up, including the launch of the i-mode® service in the Philippines.

The share acquisition and tie-up with PLDT will take place after DoCoMo and PLDT's wholly owned mobile subsidiary, SMART Communications, Inc. (SMART), complete registration with the concerned authorities in the Philippines regarding the i-mode service, and also conclude an i-mode license agreement.

As part of the tie-up, DoCoMo will support PLDT and SMART in introducing i-mode and W-CDMA services and promoting international roaming between Japan and the Philippines. In addition, DoCoMo will appoint one director each to the boards of PLDT and SMART and may consider increasing its investment in PLDT if a suitable opportunity arises.
