Guadalajara, capital of the State of Jalisco in Mexico, is a highly industrialized city and the headquarters of important international businesses. In 2005, the city was named the American Capital of Culture for its hospitality, cultural and recreational attractions, cuisine, and well-known Book Fair. The opening of the new Panama-Guadalajara route will connect Guadalajara with the major cities of South America and the Caribbean through Copa's Hub of the Americas in Panama.

Punta Cana, located on the eastern coast of the Dominican Republic, is one of the main tourist attractions of the Caribbean, offering beautiful beaches, attractive resorts and an active nightlife. Copa's new service to Punta Cana will connect it with the most important destinations in the continent through the Hub of the Americas in Panama. Additionally, the Punta Cana International Airport, located a short distance from the city, is the arriving airport/entry point for tourists visiting other nearby popular resort areas such as Bávaro and Uvero Alto. In 2006, more than half of the tourists who traveled to the Dominican Republic visited Punta Cana. This new destination will complement Copa's existing service to tourism destinations, which includes cities such as Cancun, Orlando, Cartagena, and Río de Janeiro.
